Don't Study It—Read It

Any work of fiction, the most intricate novel or the simplest tale, is, after all, primarily intended for our entertainment and not as a means of discipline. Our manifest duty is to enjoy the story in question. To approach it in any other frame of mind than that of pleasant anticipation is to do the author an injustice.

Barnaby Rudge should be first read from cover to cover, attentively but rapidly, for the story's sake. It is an absorbing narrative, and our principal business is to become absorbed in it at once and as thoroughly as may be. We must forget the real world that lies about us and live for the time being in the wonderful imaginary world that the literary artist has created. By the rapid reading of a novel—which, by the way, is an altogether different thing from a superficial reading—we obtain the broad and massive effects that the novelist aimed to produce. —Leon H. Vincent in his introduction to

Huxley's Autobiography and Essays

By BRANDER MATTHEWS

Students who have heretofore thought of Huxley as a scientist only have a delightful surprise awaiting them in this celebrated collection of entertaining and instructive essays.

These books will put new life into your English department. Every book has been approved by the N.E.A. Committee on the reorganization of English in secondary schools and the editors rank among the leading literary men in America.

The next numbers to appear will be:

Selected Writings of Lincoln, by Albert Bushnell Hart

Sheridan's "The Rivals," by William Lyon Phelps

(Ready in April)

Stevenson's Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

By RICHARD BURTON

This story is breathlessly absorbed by those who are sensitive to morals and psychology, since it is a spiritual allegory, yet just as truly is it a favorite with all who are fond of a thrilling melodrama told by a consummate artist of invention and expression.

Teach students to think

EXPOSITORY WRITING. By MERVIN JAMES CURL, Formerly Instructor in English, University of Illinois. $1.40.

This text regards the student's problem in writing as one of strategy—the objective, a definite effect in the reader's mind. Practical discussions, 50,000 words in selections from the best contemporary writing, and scores of stimulating exercises show how to discover what effect is desired and how to gain it.

"A book that can be taught."—FRED LEWIS PATTEE, LITT.D., Professor of English and American Literature, Pennsylvania State College.

"A book which puts everything that needs to be said on the theory and practice of exposition where it naturally and logically belongs."—E. CHARLTON BLACK, Head of the Department of English and American Literature, Boston University.

SENTENCES AND THINKING. By NORMAN FOERSTER and J. M. STEADMAN, JR., Department of English, University of North Carolina. $0.80.

Designed for the first term of Freshman English, this text gives a concise and well-knitted account of the essentials of sentence-making. The student is trained to think out the reasons for "rules" and is thus taught to express thought accurately.

"I know of no other handbook which presents the essentials of composition—and nothing but essentials—with such succinctness and such interest. The Freshman should actually enjoy using it."—G. R. ELLIOTT, Professor of English Literature, Bowdoin College.

Teachers of English!

ARE you teaching rules of Grammar, or the power to express exact thought by means of Observation and Discrimination? Are you teaching mere knowledge from the printed page, or the power to comprehend by means of Concentration?

If you believe that real teaching of the Mother Tongue means development of powers of Concentration, Judgment, and Memory you will want to know what are the exact capacities of your pupils. You will want to adapt your teaching to those capacities.

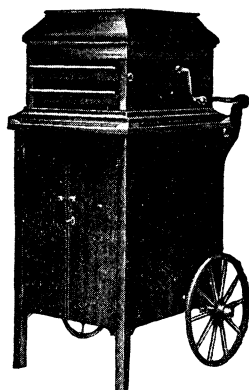

The Measures of Musical Talent by Professor Carl Seashore, Head of the Department of Psychology of the University of Iowa, are designed primarily to test and record the native capacities of pupils for Pitch, Intensity, Time, Consonance, and Memory. At the same time they are the best psychological tests in Concentration, Judgment, and Memory, the three most needed powers of mind for successful work in English.

English Teachers! Bring the Grafonola into your classroom, not only to play the musical selections of the poetry studied, but to test your pupils for their mental capacities for your work. Then adapt your teaching and exercises to the capacities of your pupils.

These five tests have been placed in convenient record form by the Columbia Graphophone Company, and may be secured from any Columbia Dealer.

A complimentary copy of the Manual of Instructions will be sent upon request.

VICTROLA

The Victrola does not forget the country schools!

"A rural school
without a Victrola is an educational tragedy."

—Dr. Albert E. Winship.

The Victrola as an active factor in National and State Drives for Rural Betterment has carried our message of altruistic educational service to the small communities of the Great Lake shores, the prairies of the Central West, and the mountain keeps of the West.

Fifty per cent. of the children of America are in rural schools. Until the Victor broadened its great constructive service to reach the rural communities, as well as the cities, music was rarely taught and seldom heard by children of the country districts. As a part of this sincere desire to bring the advantages and the culture of the cities to the small schools of the country, the Victor presents a new revised edition of

"The Victrola in Rural Schools"

This booklet, profusely illustrated, contains a store of musical information, biographies, and model lessons for teaching the broader use of music. It deals with many choice Victor Records which furnish material for School Marching, Calisthenics, Folk Dances, Singing Games, Writing Exercises, Rote Songs, Folk Songs, Art Songs, Ballads, Duets, Opera Selections, Teaching Exercises, Ear Training, Nature Study, Community Singing, Violin, 'Cello, Flute, Harp, Xylophone, Bells, Band, Orchestra, Stories, and English Literature.

Hitchcock's Junior English Book

By A. M. HITCHCOCK, Hartford Public High School

(Ready in March)

□ This book is designed for use in what Mr. Hitchcock calls "the critical but somewhat neglected eighth and ninth years." It is, of course, similar in method to the author's previous Practice Books, with adaptation to the needs of younger pupils. Practice in simple composition, and word and sentence drill are assumed as prime necessities. Abundance of oral drill, anticipation of common errors, flexibility of arrangement are features which appeal at once to the hard-worked teacher.

WRITING THROUGH READING

by Robert M. Gay, Professor of English, Simmons College. The title Writing through Reading suggests the fundamental truth on which the book is based—that the best writing is cultivated by the best reading. Professor Gay, through his own experience in teaching, has worked out a feasible application of this truth in a series of lessons adapted in length to a Summer School course or to a corresponding portion of a year's course in school or college. Writing through Reading is a modern classroom book that will be welcomed by all who wish to become good writers. The Harvard-Cleveland High-School Course in English

¶ The Harvard-Cleveland Course in English is now available in mimeographed form. It represents the work of many committees, some appointed from the Cleveland staff and others from classes in the Division of Education of the Harvard Summer School.

¶ The course offers detailed suggestions for each grade of Junior and Senior High Schools (Grades 7-12). The detailed treatment—very practical in its nature—is given under seven distinct headings:

1. Grammar
2. Voice Technique
3. Oral Composition
4. Written Composition
5. Literature
6. List of Books for Class Reading
7. List of Books for Outside Reading. An appendix of twenty pages discusses Spelling, Ethics, and Voice Training.

¶ The course has been edited under the general supervision of Charles Swain Thomas, Director of English in the Cleveland High Schools, and Henry W. Holmes, of the Division of Education, Harvard University.

¶ This course, containing 156 pages, may be secured from the Division of Education, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Price $1.00. Postage extra.

The World's Best Literature

in three small bookshelves; literature of every age and in every mood; poetry and prose; fiction, essays, biography, the drama; literary units and anthologies; "classics" traditionally interpreted as literature that has stood the test of time, and "classics" so termed because courageous editors insist upon recognizing merit in the product of today—the variety which is offered you in Macmillan's Pocket Classics Series is without a parallel among American school publications.

The entire collection, as a unit, is a literary thesaurus for your library.

Individual volumes of selections—anthologies in special fields of English and American literature—are characterized by the same sanity of choice that has determined the make-up of the series.

Every volume is carefully edited.

Revised Edition

Woolley's Handbook of Composition

THIS new edition has been thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged and is printed from entirely new electrotpe plates. The revision has been made by Edward H. Gardner, Associate Professor of Business Administration in the University of Wisconsin. Professor Gardner has availed himself of the author's later ideas and statements as embodied in notes and in his books published after the issue of the original edition of the Handbook. In its new form the work will maintain the authoritative place so long filled by the earlier edition.

The paragraph numbers of the original edition have been retained, and the new material has been so interpolated that those familiar with the original numbering will use the book as an old friend.

MODERN SHORT STORIES

By FREDERICK H. LAW

12mo

303 pages

$1.10

THIS is a collection of twenty-two representative stories by well-known modern writers, dealing with modern life, modern thought, and the general interest of the day. The arrangement is such that the stories at once appeal to the student's sense of the familiar and at the same time illustrate the development of the short story. The book follows such a natural development that the student's conception of the short story grows with his reading. There is an admirable introduction on the short story and valuable suggestions for study; particularly for carrying the principles into actual practice in short story writing. Every suggestion is made upon a modern, school-life point of contact. It establishes a bond between the school work and life outside.
